Knowledge regarding the essential facts of in vitro diagnostics and rare diseases essential for the optimal conduct of high-risk prenatal diagnosis. Knowledge regarding in vitro diagnostics (IVD) and rare diseases essential for the optimal conduct of high-risk prenatal diagnosis (HR-PD) could be helpful for HR-PD providers to better understand, manage and appropriately inform patients. The aim of this survey was to assess HR-PD providers' knowledge regarding IVD and rare diseases essential for the optimal conduct of HR-PD.

Eligible participants were invited to fill out an online survey. Three hundred and sixty HR-PD providers were invited to fill out the survey between May and October 2016. Thirty-five responses were received, an overall response rate of 10.4%. The majority of respondents had extensive experience with rare disease testing [72.7% (25/35)]. The mean number of rare diseases tested for was 0.53 (IQR 0.25-1.00). Eleven respondents (31.4%) reported having received counselling regarding the value of genetic testing with non-invasive prenatal testing (NIPT), whereas most respondents reported that they did not receive counselling regarding the importance of IVD (91.4%, 31/34). Furthermore, 82.9% (29/35) of respondents indicated that they would be interested in an educational programme aimed at improving HR-PD providers' knowledge regarding IVD and rare diseases. This survey demonstrated that HR-PD providers have limited knowledge regarding IVD and rare diseases essential for the optimal conduct of HR-PD, suggesting that an educational programme could help to improve knowledge in this field.

Q: Python: How to get parent of a method from imported module? There's a module `foo.bar` imported to another module `foo`. Yet, when I try to do `foo.bar()`, I don't know how to get the parent `foo`. While I could do some ugly things, I would like to find a built-in way. For example, something like `method_of(bar)` might work. I just couldn't find a way to do it yet. A: You can get it with `type(name).__module__`. After that you need to join it with a dot. So if you have a module object `m` then `m.type(m.foobar).__module__` will return the module that contains `foobar`.
