A pinched medial hamstring usually occurs when one of the houndstooth tendons, gracilis or semitendinosus, gets stuck in the scar tissue and . This usually happens after a bad jump from a height, when the muscles attached to the hips are trying to return to their original position. Rarely, pinching occurs due to a torn tendon, usually from a fall from a height onto straight legs. Symptomatically, pinching of the medial muscles is immediately manifested by pain localized on the back of the thigh, and a feeling of "leakage" of the leg. Sometimes the pain radiates down the back of the leg up to the knee, as well as the outer thigh.
