Q: How can I make my new mothership stand out? I noticed that my new mothership came with a mode where it can "stand out of its mothership". But I don't know if that's meant to be a cosmetic change, and if so, how to make it stand out, without having it stick out. I thought about adding a spoiler or a watermark, but those only seem to make it stick out. A: I believe the reason it's called "Stand Out of its Mothership" is that it looks like a laser sight, so it's probably the function you're referring to. As to making it stick out, there's not much you can do. If it gets too much attention it'll look awkward and you'll want to hide it. Not having it stick out will make it less noticeable and more easily hidden. However, if you want to try and make it stick out, try adding some hover texture. It'd hide a bit if you don't turn up the intensity, but it could be fun to play around with. What if I need this hover texture for an animation? Since you said you don't want the mothership to stick out, just drop the texture on top and add a short fade to it. Just over half of all boards of NHS Scotland have had to cancel home visiting services due to staff shortages, according to figures presented at a Holyrood committee meeting. Of those boards which have not cancelled the service, half reported that there were gaps in their staff allocation plans. The development comes as NHS bosses in Scotland prepare to cancel the funding of home visiting services in seven areas across the country. Home visiting staff are frontline workers at the forefront of delivering vital services to families with children under the age of five. They visit vulnerable families on a weekly basis and assess their needs in order to provide family support, advice and reassurance about how to get extra help. The news comes as figures published this week show there are now 3,000 fewer staff in NHS boards in Scotland than in 2010. NHS bosses across Scotland say they
